

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A clock deciding apparatus generates a plurality of delay clock signals and outputs a clock signal most similar to an outer clock signal to reduce the time used to decide the clock greatly. Also, even if a frequency of the clock signal is changed slightly or phase shift happens due to outer causes, the clock deciding apparatus according to the present invention is able to correspond to the above situations rapidly, and therefore, stable clock signal can be provided to the system.